

Abstract for session: Training Supervisors and Leadership

Supervisors and group leaders are considered to have unique potential to leverage research quality. Yet what do we mean when we talk about a supervisor? What kind of training is available for supervisors, and what advice would be useful for university leadership to support responsible supervision? This interactive session starts with an overview of previous work, both in the area of mentoring, and in supervision for responsible research. We close with reflections on how leadership can support responsible supervision. Participants' voices are actively solicited during the session and we hope you come join us to think along about further needs in training supervisors and leadership.